UPHILL CLIMB Kentucky • 1928

Loaded down with five white-knuckling occupants, plus one on the running board, a Whippet automobile kicks up a cloud of dust as it climbs a steep leaf-covered hill. Produced by the Willys-Overland Motor Company and named after the dog breed known for its racing ability, the four-cylinder Whippet Model 96 was first introduced in 1926 and became an immediate success due to its uniquely small size, impressive speed, and relatively low price of $535. The following year, the six-cylinder Model 98 set a new speed record for stock passenger cars under $1,000 by averaging 56.2 MPH. The year this photo was taken, the Whippet jumped to third place in popularity behind Chevrolet and Ford with 315,000 cars sold. Though it was discontinued in 1931 due to the Great Depression, the Whippet certainly made its mark on automotive history.

THE HOOK

Detroit, Michigan • 1959

Legendary musician John Lee Hooker stands outside Joe's Record Shop on Detroit's Hastings Street, where he recorded with storeowner and producer Joe Von Battle in the backroom studio. Born in the Mississippi Delta—birthplace of the blues—John Lee Hooker left home at 14 and worked his way north, arriving in Detroit in 1943. There, he quickly became a fixture in the nightclubs of Black Bottom, a neighborhood known for its vibrant music scene. Known as "King of the Boogie," Hooker's powerful guitar, unmistakable voice, and driving rhythms earned him multiple Grammy Awards. With songs like, "Boom Boom," "Boogie Chillen," and "One Bourbon, One Scotch, One Beer," John Lee Hooker remains one of the most influential musicians of all time. In 1991, he was inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame.

OOPS-A-DAISY

Washington, D.C. • 1922

This Ford Model T found itself in an awkward but comical predicament, thanks to a motoring mishap that left it with splayed wheels, a bent fender, and crumpled hood. Humor helped define Henry Ford's "Tin Lizzie," a simple, affordable, durable, and beloved vehicle that first hit America's roads in 1908. Ford jokes were a staple of vaudeville routines and newspaper columns, appeared in songs and in books, and were passed along by car owners. One example: "Why is a Model T like a millionaire baby? Because it has a new rattle every day." Ford loved the gags, maintaining that every joke sold a car, and by the time production ended in 1927, some 15 million Model Ts had been sold.

QR CODE VIDEO CARDS

The America collection invites you to view the present through the past. Now we're taking it a step further! Archival film footage is used to create a short but powerful journey into the past through a QR code. New header cards call out which designs include the videos.

THEMED COLLECTIONS

History can be viewed through many lenses, and the America collection brings details from the past into focus. Instead of focusing on time and place, our themed collections celebrate shared passions and experiences shared by Americans across the years.

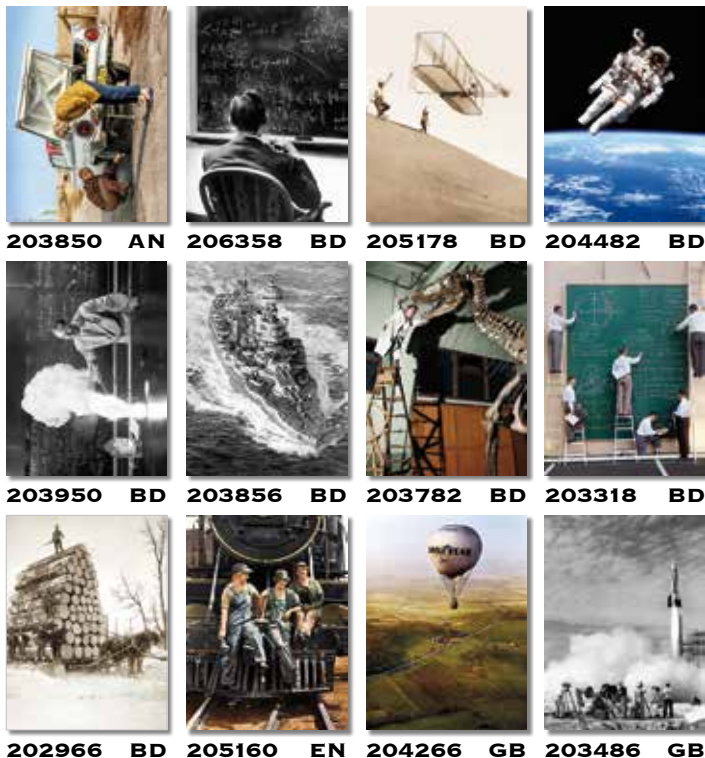

These suggested merchandising models can be used to help inspire custom assortments that appeal to different retailers. To discover even more cards that support these themed collections, check out the searchable "tags" on our retailer reorder site:

HOPE AND COURAGE Italy • Circa 1944

A Tuskegee Airman rests on the wing of a P-51 Mustang, photographed by Major Robert S. Scurlock of the U.S. Army Air Corps. The first African-Americans to serve as pilots for the U.S. Military, many of the aviators, instructors, mechanics, and ground personnel who trained at the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama during World War II were away from home for the first time, and in June 1943, around 450 flyers received word of their overseas deployment. In letters written home to families, friends, and sweethearts from as far away as North Africa and Italy, these young airmen spoke of fulfilling their boyhood dreams to fly. By the end of the war, close to 100 Tuskegee Airmen were awarded The Distinguished Flying Cross, which honors servicemen and women for their "heroism or extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight."

A LITTLE HISTORY ON THE BACK OF EVERY CARD

AMERICA

GREAT MINDS

Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, New Jersey • 1947

Quietly contemplating a blackboard filled with a complex array of algebraic equations is mathematician Richard D. Shafer, PhD, one of the many "big brains" invited to pursue knowledge for its own sake at the Institute for Advanced Study (IAS). The Institute, just over a mile from Princeton University, was founded in 1930 and funded entirely by grants, endowments, and gifts. It has been the academic home for some of the world's greatest minds, including Albert Einstein and J. Robert Oppenheimer. There are no classes and no degrees—just a congenial environment that encourages intellectual inquiry and theoretical research in four separate schools: Historical Studies, Natural Sciences, Mathematics, and Social Sciences. Research at IAS has contributed to the development of modern computing and pioneering theories of space and time.
